: CLUB FINANCES IMPROVED :
DURING PAST THREE MONTHS, :
TREASURER TELLS OPC BOARD :

In the three months since the Board of Governors' last meeting, Club finances have shown a marked degree of improvement, the Secretary-Treasurer told the Board at its September 29 meeting. For those three months, said JOSEPH J. WURZEL, the Club is ahead to the extent of $323. In detail: June produced a loss of $350, July a profit of $434 and August a profit of $240. During the same three-month period, the Secretary-Treasurer said, the OPC's total assets, including cash, were reduced by $366 from $17,493 as of June 30 to $17,127 as of August 31.

WURZEL drew particular attention to the fact that the improvement in this fiscal year thus far was attributable solely to a reduction in expenditures and not to increased earnings. From April 1 through August 31, expenses have averaged $1,150 per month, while income has averaged $1,220 monthly, both figures including the Annual Awards Presentation Dinner. Thus, while current monthly income has fallen by $80, expenses have decreased by at least $550 monthly.

WURZEL further emphasized the necessity for discovering sources of new income.

One of the year's most sensational magazine projects, the Collier's October 27 issue -- "Preview of the War We Do Not Want" -- represents the semi-brainchild and ll entire months work of CORNELIUS J. RYAN, Collier's associate editor. Released on October 19, this largest Collier's issue in history is devoted entirely to a Hiroshima-type presentation of a future war in which the U.S. is victorious over the Soviet Union. The sequence tells how conflict was accidently set off by the USSR and successfully fought by the Allied powers. It later explains how Russia was returned to the Russians under enlightened occupation policies.

Originally conceived by RYAN and polished by Collier's Publisher Edward Anthony, the project for 10 months was known only by six editorial staffers, and to them as "Operation Eggnog"—a key word which more than once raised eyebrows of Western Union and cable personnel entrusted with transmitting messages referring to it. Editor Louis Ruppel gave RYAN a green light to carry out commissioning of text and picture material, which includes contributions by OPCers EDWARD R. MURROW, HAL BOYLE, Past President LOWELL THOMAS and EDWIN D. CANHAM, among more than a dozen other top writers and commentators.

In collecting material for the sensational issue, RYAN criss-crossed the U.S. and traveled to London and Paris. The project was kept strictly under wraps, owing to the semi-classified material involved, and for 10 months of its existence most Collier's personnel were mystified over the top-secret, feverish activity. It was also reported this week that the press run had been increased by half a million copies, prior to publication, to handle an anticipated rush to newsstands.

Past President LOUIS P. LOCHNER on October 4 handled the commercial spot on the new NBC-TV shot, "Foreign Intrigue", which each week fictionalizes experiences of foreign correspondents ... After a vacation in the U.S., HAROLD CALLENDER, chief New York Times correspondent in Paris, sailed October 4 aboard the "Ile de France" to resume his post ... A special 10th Anniversary Award of Freedom House on October 7 went to new Honorary Member Dr. ALBERTO GAINZA PAZ, editor and publisher of La Prensa, Argentine newspaper expropriated by the Peron government ...

According to a recent press release, MBS correspondent CECIL BROWN has chalked up more than 20 years as a top foreign correspondent ... Another MBSer, Maj. GEORGE FIELDING ELIOT, participated October 15 in a "War Front-Home Front" broadcast ... EDGAR ANSEL MOWRER writes "Who Will Counsel the Counselor?" for the September 29 issue of the Saturday Review of Literature ...

Mrs. William Oatis, wife of the Associated Press correspondent imprisoned by the Czechs, was interviewed by President JOHN DALY on the CBS-TV show, "It's News to Me", on October 9.
"The price for freedom of the press", she told the OPC head, "should not be classified on a price tag. And as for my husband — well, I know Bill doesn't think it's too high." Mrs. Oatis, who later commented on Club efforts to expedite her husband's fight for freedom, said she felt the State Department is doing everything in its power to obtain his release. After the program, she revealed, "I've been writing Bill every week since I first found out where he was. But I haven't any idea if he's receiving any of my letters. I don't hear from him at all. I just hope."

MORE OATIS NEWS: Some 10,000 of William Oatis' fellow Indianans early this month signed a petition pledging their full support to any action by this Government to free him, according to a special dispatch to The Bulletin from the National Memorial and Publication Commission of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. Signing of the giant petition featured the four-day observance of National News-paper Week, sponsored by the Elks Lodge of Marion, Ind., Oatis' home town, October 3 to 6. The petition will be delivered to President Truman ...

TOKYO DATELINE: -- (Special to The Bulletin) -- Rutherford Poats, who recently returned to Japan after three months in the U.S., has been named chief correspondent and Japan bureau chief for United Press, according to Ernest Hoberecht, UP chief for Asia, who makes his headquarters here ... Marguerite Higgins of the New York Herald Tribune due to arrive here by air October 13 for a ten-day stay ... Willet Weeks, also of the Herald Trib, due shortly for another ten days ... Robert Edgar Edick expected soon for long-time assignment on the UP staff ... Milo Farneti coming for indefinite assignment as an AP staffer ... The same for Oram Clarke Hutton, who will join the Time-Life group here ...

Joseph Fromm, representing U.S. News & World Report, returned from San Francisco peace conference coverage and has resumed his extra-curricular duties as president of the Tokyo Correspondents Club ... George Crissey, old-time UP man, recently elevated from chief, press branch, Public Information Office, GHQ, to editorial advisor in the executive office ... Frank L. Taylor of the Milwaukee Sentinel en route here for a three-week's writing tour ... James Cannon, Baltimore Sun, returned to the U.S. October 4. -- (JACOBUS TenBERGE).

Add "Another Missing OPCer Heard From": HAZEL HARTZOG TOW writes from her home in El Centro, Calif., that she's "still living in El Centro, at present at Hangover Farms, which my husband is managing. A case of measles in June brought an end to a part-time string job for a local weekly. At present my activities include trying to keep up with our 13-month-old daughter, Kristin, and a part-time secretarial job with the Imperial County Planning Commission. I'm also trying free-lance articles on this part of the West..."

This natural reticence on the part of new Members or Members who have been away for varying riods of time is often difficult for us — on the spot — to understand. The vitality of any organization — especially one like the OPC — depends on the active participation of just such individuals. Certainly they should turn to the Club for the fellowship they require. Of course, they'll meet people they know; of course, they're welcome — regardless of the newness of their membership or length of their absence.

When did you last attend an OPC program event? If you did, did you enjoy it? Well, the Editor wants to extend a cordial invitation (which you really shouldn't need) to all those who haven't "been around" lately -- not only the newly admitted Member, but those whose faces we haven't seen and miss -- to come to the Club's next scheduled event. Are you getting your dues' worth out of the Club? You won't know if you don't come around ...

The Brauerie Schwechat A.G. of Vienna, Austria, makers of "Wiener Burgerbrau -- : the World's Oldest Lager-Beer", cordially invites the Overseas Press Club to visit : their booth 507 (4th floor) at the 36th Annual National Hotel Exposition, November : 5 through 9 at Grand Central Palace, Lexington Ave., 46th to 47th St., in New York.

KALTENBORN "DISCOURAGED" OVER CONTAINING ACTION IN KOREA; MRS. K. RELATES BALI ANECDOTE H.V. and Olga KALTENBORN entertained Club Members and their guests with a vivid account of their three-month trip around the world at a cocktail party in the Clubrooms, October 11, attended by almost 70 persons. Declaring that he "was terribly discouraged by what I learned in Korea," H.V. said that General Ridgway told him: "we are not here to win a victory -- we are fighting a containing action". He said that "generally speaking, the American people have no idea of the responsibility they have assumed throughout the world."

Olga Kaltenborn, who carried three cameras, told of a week they spent in Bali and how the law forbade taking pictures of native women sans clothing.

SANFORD GRIFFITH, fresh from three weeks behind the Iron Curtain in East Germany, gave Members a peek into his experiences, and Past President LOUIS P. LOCHNER suggested he appear on a program in the near future. SANDY replied that he couldn't bill himself -- because he is Program Chairman, but everybody agreed this talk should be scheduled.
